Nashville-based Pop Singer Brit Daniels Debuts New Single and Lyric Video for "Eulogy"

Up and coming Nashville-based pop songstress Brit Daniels is proud to debut her new single and breakup anthem, "Eulogy," today on Vevo. The accompanying lyric video, shot and directed by Ford Fairchild (Lady Gaga, Kelsea Ballerini, Jason Aldean etc), showcases Daniels' emotion as she expresses lyrics like "what we had will rest in pieces" while her confidence beams through neon lights. Check out the lyric video now, premiering on Breathe Heavy.

"Eulogy is a empowering song that is about knowing your worth in a relationship, and not settling for less than what you deserve. It makes a strong statement that it's okay to let people go when they aren't putting forth a solid amount of effort. I love this song so much because it is so unique in that it is centered around your last words to a person who you're finished with before you move on. I have been through more than one of these situations (unfortunately), but every time I listen back to this song, I feel such a strength and joy in knowing that I'm better off without those people in my life, and even though I didn't technically get closure in some of those situations, this song gives me that." - Brit Daniels

"Eulogy" is now available at all digital retailers - iTunes, Spotify, Apple Music.

ABOUT BRIT DANIELS:

Brit Daniels intertwines energetic pop with vibrant elements of rock and EDM to create a sound that completely encompasses everything about her. Born and raised just outside of Dallas, TX, her talent was solidified at the ripe old age of two when her mother caught her belting out Twinkle Twinkle Little Star in their backyard. Daniels really began honing her craft and truly understanding herself as an artist when she began recording in local studios, performing in various talent shows and competitions and singing the National Anthem for several Texas Rangers baseball games. Daniels picked up her life after completing a degree in Radio, Television, and Film from the University of North Texas and an internship in radio to move her journey to Nashville to begin working at a major label and management company in order to learn how the business aspect of music works. Splitting her time between Nashville and Los Angeles, Daniels has begun work on a new project with the help of producer Jordan Galvan who works with 30 Seconds to Mars and Evanescence, as well as Mike Malchicoff (Kanye West, Kirk Franklin, Fun), Dale Becker (Cam, Macklemore & Ryan Lewis, Michelle Williams) and writers Phil Barton (Sara Evans, Cassadee Pope, Lee Brice), and Lindsay Rimes (Troye Sivan, The Summer Set, Drake White).

Music has always been the constant in Daniels' life. From her mother putting headphones on her belly while pregnant with Daniels to her first instrument given to her by her father, she knew becoming a musician was her fate. But, when Daniels was a freshman in college, the unexpected happened and her father passed away due to injuries sustained from a car accident while he was on duty as a police officer. Through this experience, Daniels started refining who she was as an artist and the stories she wanted to tell. Her first single, "Eulogy" shows that troubles you face can break you, but it's up to you to move on, find the good, and see that you might be better off in life because of them. In her father's death, Daniels found her strength and her passion ignited. Thriving on an outgoing and bubbly personality, she's not afraid to dig deep and delve into anything that life throws her way.

"You start doing so much to fit in and be popular that suddenly standing out becomes the challenge. Don't be afraid to be yourself, trust in what you love and focus on that." - Brit Daniels
